

High Bunch Corner Kick

DESCRIPTION

This corner kick tactic relies on a bit of deception and timing. Four players can start on the far side of the 18 box and should make it confusing for the defenders just before the ball is served. Before the player serves the ball in from the corner player #2 makes a run from close to mid-field toward the near side of the 18 box. This is an effort to force any defender marking that area to vacate the space to mark player #2. Player #3 then makes a run into that space and the ball is played into that area. There should be enough confusion from the pack so that player #3 is not marked too closely.
